

TRAINING

Identifying and Monitoring the Outcomes of Environmental Projects and Services

Course Outline

Officers, managers and leaders working in the public sector are often challenged by the difficulties of demonstrating the benefits, progress and changes that result from programmes of work to engage with and educate the public on environmental issues and enviro crime.

This course is based on a simple but effective method of outcomes monitoring, that will help delegates to both identify the desired outcomes of their work, and plan a simple strategy for monitoring those outcomes in order to communicate the value of their work to funders. The approach can be applied both to teams/departments/schemes and to stand-alone projects.

Course Aim

This course will enable delegates to implement a simple but effective approach to identifying and monitoring the outcomes of their work.

Learning Outcomes

After attending this course delegates will be able to:

- create a personalised 'planning triangle' for their area of work
- identify the aims and objectives of their work
- identify the actions and desired outcomes of their work
- identify a range of indicators to monitor in order to demonstrate achievement of project outcomes
- demonstrate knowledge of evaluating the outcomes of their work.
